PROGRAM OF REDPATH CHAUTAUQUA IS OUT

will be planned to meet again these well remembered characters from the days of nursery lore, which will come forth from an especially constructed "Mother Goose" book.

Another day will feature Antonio Sola, noted Spanish artist, at Waukegan, an Indian princess prima donna. Waukegan appears in Indian costume, singing Indian songs and telling Indian legends. She is young and beautiful, vivacious, and gifted with a personality one seldom meets on the platform. She will easily prove a sensation.

The lectures of this season will again bring the usual inspiration and helpfulness, both to individuals and communities, so essential to a well balanced chautauqua week. Everyone will remember the great Health Day program presented by Dr. Charles E. Barker two years ago. This year "Efficiency" as a subject which is only second to "Health" will be featured. The specialist on this subject will be H. L. Fogelman, of New York City, known as "Gatling-gun Fogelman," because of his ability to speak 300 words a minute. Mr. Fogelman makes the point that every human being is a salesman, if he sells nothing more than his personality. In a magnetic way he will explain the laws of salesmanship which should interest women in their homes as much as merchants in their stores.

Miss Marie Mayer, who played the part of Mary Magdalene in the passion play at Oberammergau in 1910, the only actor in this world-famous drama who has ever spoken in America, will lecture on the "Passion Play" and the tragic fate of her unhappy people in the midst of a world at war.

Dr. George L. McNutt, widely known as "the dinner pail man," who many years ago left a Presbyterian pulpit in Illinois to study labor conditions, comes on this program with a timely and eloquent message. Mr. McNutt has gained his knowledge in the laboratory of living men. He has worked in the shops, in the western camps, and even on the streets.

Provided that congress is not in session, Miss Jennette Rankin, America's first congresswoman, will be one of the headline lecturers of chautauqua week. Miss Rankin has already been engaged for this entire chautauqua, and only the calling of an extra session of congress will change her plans. Should an extra session be called, another headline lecturer will take her place on the chautauqua program while she is in Washington.

The Oratorio Artists, which come on the third day, is one of the standard high class quartets of this generation. Read Miller is probably the best known oratorio tenor in this country. He was born in South Carolina and received there his early musical education. He has appeared on many occasions with Walter Damrosch and the New York Symphony orchestra, the Philharmonic club of Chicago, Frederick Wheeler, bass, has toured with many famous organizations, including Victor Herbert and his orchestra. Myrtle Thornburgh, soprano, has appeared with the New York Symphony orchestra as well as many leading choral societies. Nevada Van Der Veer, the contralto, won success abroad before coming to this country and has sung with some of the most famous organizations in this country, including the New York Symphony orchestra. Each one is widely known for his or her phonograph records. The Oratorio will delight the most discriminating music lovers. Nothing better has ever appeared under Redpath management.

We are informed by the Redpath management that the talent this season is costing approximately $300 more per town than last year's program. The extra cost represents an additional expenditure rather than an advance in per capita salary. In spite of this increased cost and the rising tide of general prices for nearly everything one buys, chautauqua tickets are not costing any more than they did before. Here is one article at least that has not advanced in price.

The date for Alma is July 31 to August 7.
